Profile

The main thing I remember about my childhood is that my desire to research and learn is as alive as it is today. I have been especially interested in getting to know different cultures and learning different languages and literature since my childhood. I chose language as my main field during high school. Afterward, I majored in American Culture and Literature at Ankara University and progressed in the fields of language and literature. In my third year of university, I started studying Arabic at TÖMER, a language institution affiliated with Ankara University and graduated with a B2 diploma. At the same time, I had the opportunity to study different languages by taking two years of French in high school and two years of German at university. I have been working as an English teacher for the last two years, although not regularly. During this process, I experienced the pride and pleasure of being able to teach English to many children. In the meantime, I want to become more academically competent and work as an academic one day, in connection with the experiences I have gained and my interests. I can describe myself as determined and curious. I pursue my interests and goals until I achieve success in the fields, I am interested in. Because of my curiosity, my interests do not decrease, on the contrary, they increase day by day. That's why I always focus on development, knowledge, and experience.

Hobbies and Interests

Learning New Languages: It has always excited me that learning a language is a door opening to different cultures and different people. For this reason, I studied many different languages both at school and on my own. Besides English, the language in which I improved myself the most was Arabic. Now I can't wait to learn new languages.

Reading: I have been in touch with books and literature since the moment I learned to read. Exploring the magical world of literature for long hours is the best way for me to spend my free time.

Archery: I did archery for about two years during my secondary school years. Archery is a sport that requires a lot of discipline and attention. During this period, I won one bronze and one silver medal from the competitions held within the club. The biggest contribution of this sport to me is that it teaches me discipline, patience, and perseverance.

Drawing: I have been interested in drawing since my first encounter with pencils and paints. During my primary school years, I took a drawing course from my school's art teacher. In addition to drawing, I am interested in many subjects such as art history, especially related to visual arts.
